The movement towards peace between Israel and her Arab neighbours has continued since the foundation of the Israeli State in 1948. But peace there has never been, only short periods without war!

Numerous books have been written on the subject, especially from among prominent Evangelical Christian leaders worldwide. But most of them say the same thing. They point out how the United Nations and various world leaders have all given the Middle East Peace Process their best attempt, with no positive outcome.

They also underlined how over the years the world has become increasingly impatient with Israel for not proceeding with a peace settlement with the Palestinians, and even threatened to penalize her if she did not move ahead to establish a Palestinian State.

However, these same Evangelical writers went on to warn that such a concession would lead to the ultimate destruction of Israel as a sovereign Jewish State, as the goal of Islam is to wipe it out completely!

Now if we leap ahead to the current Middle East Conflict, we see those same tensions arising between Israel and America, and the same threats from European leaders, and the same warnings from a vast majority of Evangelical Christians of what agreeing to the Arab's demands would mean.

But does not Israel's genocidal assault on the Palestinians, as leading Arab States just look on, acting as if they have no power to do anything about the situation, clearly reveal that the tiny Jewish State has really nothing to worry about from her Arab neighbours after all?
